Lent

A day of rejoicing in the midst of 40 days of penance. That is today. Remember that Jesus did not criticized the Pharisees for laying heavy burdens on people's shoulders but for not lifting a finger to help them. The load, the laws and moral teachings, and practices and rules to be followed were all just as necessary then as they are still today. But they are there to help and direct us toward salvation. When they become too burdensome, the Church is to see to it that you are given some relief. So we have today. We are half way through the trial of Lent. Take a breath, relax a little and remember what we are doing all this for. Remind ourselves that it is all worth it.

It kind of reminds me of a joke that when we were 12 would have found funny. Remember I said when we were 12 years old, stupid and immature...

This man died and went to hell. The devil told him he got to choose between 3 punishments. The devil opens the door to the first room and there is a concrete floor and the people were standing on their hands for all eternity. The man said that would be too much. In the second room the floor was covered with broken glass and the people again standing on their hands for all eternity. Again the man said that would be even worse than the first. In the third room he found people standing in a room full of fecal matter up to their knees and drinking coffee. A little disgusting, but I can handle this he said. The devil told the man to join the people. As the devil was walking out of the room where this man would now spend eternity, a whistle blew and the devil turned to the people and said, "OK, coffee break is over, everyone back on your hands."

Today we get a coffee break, but tomorrow, everyone is to get back on their hands ☺ - I love you.
