Lent

WOW!!! Is it is Passion Sunday already? Yes, it seems to be if I read the Ordo correctly. That means Easter is only two more Sundays away. Time fly's. Where does the time go? Into the past is the correct answer. A place we cannot go. We are destined for the future and never to return to the past. I do not care what Hawking says about time travel. Speaking of Hawking, I wonder what he is saying now as he meets his maker.

And that is my point. We do not get a do over. We only get one chance in life to come to know, love and serve God. It is important that we get it right the first time. There is no going back in time and there is no reincarnation or any other kind of second chance.

There are still two weeks of lent left. A lot can be done in that time. To God a day is as a hundred years and a hundred years as a day. Time is not relevant to Him. Even upon our deathbed, with but less than a second left of life, God can still change our heart unto Him. But let us not wait. Let that second be now.

But I am already a believer! You fool; we can never believe enough, love enough or serve enough. Let not our arrogance and pride lead us to believe for a second that we are safe unto judgment day. Our conversion must be perpetual and ongoing, never ceasing, never at rest, never taking a break, never satisfied with progress made. Onward and forward to greater and better things. A mind that believes more fully, a heart that loves more completely and a will that serves more readily.

Are you weary yet? WIMP! You do not know what it means to be weary! Is there still life in you? Then you have not yet given it all. Unless the grain of wheat dies, it remains but a single grain and has no life. Are you a lifeless grain or will you live and bear fruit for the Lord? Like the candles upon the altar, giving its wax to be the light to the world so we must exhaust our very self. Faith is the wick, Jesus is the flame. Will we give our wax, our very self that Christ may burn brightly for the world to see? Or perhaps we do not see yet ourselves. There is still time...
